00:42:23   Stuart Cohen: One of the tools that TransForm, SPUR and our other partners in SPOT SJ is to use a great tool, Parkade to goth reduce spillover parking and to reduce the need to provide as many spots in future developments. This tech tool helps make more efficient use of parking lots, whether residential or office. It allows residents or workers to easily rent their idle parking spaces to other drivers, by the hour, day, or month in an easy to use APP. It also makes it dramatically easier for apartment buildings or workplaces to unbundle parking since Parkade efficiently deals with administration, payments, and enforcement.

Parkade can reduce demand for on-street parking near existing buildings by making better use of parking lots and garages. It will also allow new buildings to build 25-30% fewer parking spaces, by making it efficient to share spots, and simple to unbundle parking from other costs. 01:11:50   Kelly Snider: Downtown Los Altos has acres of public parking lots and sells annual permits to use them for way below market rate, always grabbed by the (ultra-wealthy) locals and filled most days with employees; seldom room for the retail shoppers and visitors who are supposed to be benefiting from the "free" public lots!
